The Department of Pharmacology and Clinical Pharmacology organized the first National Workshop in Pharmaceutical Medicine from 9th to 12th July, 2018. This workshop was organized in collaboration with postgraduate alumni of the department who are now in responsible positions within various pharmaceutical organizations. This collaboration brought together a unique blend of clinical research experts from the academia and the industry, sharing the same platform to disseminate their knowledge and firsthand experience on pharmaceutical medicine. Forty MD postgraduate students, from fifteen colleges, registered for this workshop. The curriculum of MD Pharmacology postgraduates includes the science of Pharmaceutical Medicine as an integral component.

The workshop focussed on a pharmaceutical overview of the drug development process, research and development, drug safety in trials, regulatory affairs, the role of medical affairs in industry and an overview of population pharmacokinetic modeling in clinical trials. The participants with the help of mentors worked in small groups and were trained to design protocols for clinical trials. There was a GCP panel discussion, where experts from the institution and clinical trial experts addressed issues relating to the investigator, ethics committee and the sponsor. The inaugural address was delivered by the Principal, Dr. Anna Pulimood, with felicitations by the former principal, Dr. JP Muliyl. Dr. Anna Pulimood appreciated the organizers on their willingness to establish a collaboration between the academia and the pharmaceutical industry, for the benefit of expanding knowledge and research in the science of Pharmaceutical Medicine.
